Hackensack, NJ [03/26/08] Chinese Service Center USA is accepting book donations of all languages for the children's hospital Reach Out and Read Program.

Reach Out and Read is a national non-profit organization that promotes early literacy by giving new books to children and advice to parents about the importance of reading aloud and by encouraging parents to read with their children. Gently used and new books are distributed throughout pediatric exam rooms across the nation. Please check out their website at <http://www.reachoutandread.org/> for more information.

The Joseph M. Sanzari Children's Hospital at Hackensack University Medical Center is always looking for books, both gently used and new to help keep the shelves stocked in their "lending libraries". Please help us by donating a book to their Reach Out and Read Program.

We welcome your generous book donations for children: new born to middle school age. This activity will continue until Sunday, June 1st, 2008. For more information, please email info@ChineseServiceCenter.org or call 201-384-5773 for more information.
